UTAH IN REVIEW — 1990

After a number of years of serious financial problems, Utah state finances improved dramatically over the past two years. Not only was the state able to meet all of its legislative commitments in 1987–88 and 1988–89 without any across–the–board reductions, but it also was able to conclude each of these two years with sizable surpluses and provide for substantial tax reductions at the end of each year.

In September, 1989, the Utah Legislature meeting in special session enacted a general income tax reduction totaling an estimated $35 million. In addition, it changed Utah's retirement laws so as to satisfy a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision and dealt with other emergency state problems.

When Governor Bangerter submitted his 1990–91 state budget to the 1990 Utah Legislature in January, state finances were in better shape than they have been for a number of years. Utah completed the 1989 fiscal year with budget surpluses totaling $129 million. In addition, it was estimated that another $70 million in surplus funds would develop during the current (1989–90) fiscal year.

Rather than simplifying the budgeting process, the new state affluence created added problems for the legislature and the administration. Throughout the session, local teacher groups threatened to strike unless they were provided with a substantial salary increase to make up for the years when salary boosts were scarce. Even with the surpluses, it became apparent that teacher demands could not be met from existing state resources. Although a compromise was reached in the final hours, more problems might occur when local teacher unions begin to negotiate with local school boards.

During the decade of the 1970s, Utah's population grew by 402,000 persons. Approximately 253,000 of this growth resulted from natural increase (births over deaths), with the remaining 149,000 coming from in–migration. This in–migration continued during the early years of the 1980 decade, but reversed itself in the mid–1980s. There has been a steady out–migration of population from Utah over the past six years.

There are signs, however, that the out–migration of population from Utah soon may be ending. Migration trends usually are a reflection of economic progress and the availability of employment opportunities. Over the past 12 months, the number of nonagricultural jobs in Utah increased by approximately 31,500, and the unemployment rate was at an eleven–year low.

Another encouraging sign for Utah's long–range financial future is that school enrollment growth has been slowing down. If present trends continue, school enrollments in Utah should level off by 1992 or 1993, and then begin to decline for a few years. This should help ease some of the financial problems that has been plaguing public schools in the state.

One potential benefit of the large school enrollments in the past is that Utah schools are producing an increasing number of high school graduates that will provide the state with a large, young, well–educated workforce at a time when many areas of the nation will be facing serious labor shortages. Over the past ten years, the number of high school graduates in Utah rose by 15%. It is expected that the number of high school graduates will increase by an additional 30% during the next ten years. These increases come at a time when the number of high school graduates have been declining nationally.

Because of Utah's abnormally large school population and the fact that we have the highest dependency ratio in the nation (nonworking to working–age population), the tax burden in Utah is considerably higher than the national average. According to a recent tax analysis, the overall tax burden for a family of four persons living in Salt Lake City is between 7% and 19% higher than the U.S. median at various income levels ranging between $20,000 and $100,000. The study revealed that Utah appears to be high in its use of the sales tax and the individual income tax and about average or slightly below in its use of the property tax.

An examination of consolidated state finances for the 1988–89 fiscal year shows that state revenue in Utah totaled $2,859,091,000 and state expenditures amounted to $2,673,414,000. State revenues climbed by nearly $316 million during fiscal 1989, while state expenditures increased by only $181 million. The revenue growth would have been even greater, but special tax cuts were authorized by special sessions of the Utah Legislature in 1988 and 1989 to offset some of the tax increases made in 1987.

The general sales tax continues to be the largest single tax source for the state of Utah, accounting for 36% of all tax revenue and 23% of total revenue receipts. The state sales tax is followed closely by the individual income tax which produces 22.3% of total state revenue. The property tax also is a major revenue producer in Utah, but all of the revenue from the property tax is used to finance local units of government.

Nearly 83% of all state spending in Utah is for education, social services, and transportation. Education continues to be the number one area of state spending, accounting for $1.1 billion, or 41% of total state spending for all purposes. Not included in this total are education expenditures from locally–raised taxes, expenditures for capital projects at the educational institutions, and spending from restricted funds at the Utah colleges and universities.

Social services (public assistance, corrections, mental health, family services, public health, unemployment benefits, medicaid, etc.) is the second most important area of state spending in Utah, accounting for $719 million, or 27% of all state expenditures. Highway and transportation expenditures in Utah last year totaled $396 million, or 15% of total expenditures.

NOTE: Above figures are based on the sales tax revenues that are allocated to local units during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1989. Since there is a delay in remitting sales tax collections to the State Tax Commission, the data actually reflects business operations during the 12 month period ended March 31, 1989. Sales tax allocations to local units are amounts distributed after deduction of administrative expenses by the State Tax Commission. Gross taxable sales includes or reflects use tax collections as well as sales tax collections.

* Excludes expenditures for administration and for social services.

 Beginning in January, 1974, money payments for old-age assistance, aid to the blind, and aid to the disabled were paid directly by the Federal Social Security Office.

Prior to fiscal 1962, medical assistance expenditures are not shown separately. Such medical expenditures are included in program expenditures for these earlier years.

Prepared by UTAH FOUNDATION from reports of the Utah Department of Social Services and Utah Department of Health.

* Individual categories add to more than the total because some persons were receiving assistance under more than one program.

 Does not include old-age recipients, blind recipients, and disabled recipients who were receiving money payments through the Federal supplemental security income program. These adult assistance categories were transferred to the Federal Social Security office on January 1, 1974.

Cases eligible for medical assistance only.

NOTE: For taxing purposes, the appraised market value is discounted by 40% in the case of primary residential property and by 20% in the case of other locally-assessed real property to determine the assessed value that is subject to taxation. Above percentages are calculated from the appraised market value before discounts and other adjustments.

* Because of the overlapping boundaries of the various special districts in the state, more than one tax rate may apply within a municipality or school district. For Example, 36 different overall tax rates are applied within Ogden City and 18 different rates are found in Salt Lake City. Actually, there are more than 180 different taxing areas in Salt Lake County, 205 in Weber County, and 70 in Davis County. In the preceding county tabulations, the different taxing areas are designated by one or more code letters following the name of the municipality or school district. Each code letter refers to some special taxing district which imposes or is authorized to impose a tax within the district. Thus, "Weber Schools - A,B,D,J,K,ee" refers to the taxing area in the Weber School District (outside of any incorporated city or town) which is in the Weber Basin Water District (A), Central Weber Sewer District (B), Ben Lomond Cemetery District (D), the Bona Vista Water District (J), the Weber County Mosquito District (K), and Weber County Fire Protection District #4 (ee). Of course, in addition to these taxing district's tax rates, the countywide rates for schools and county purposes are applied in the described taxing area.
